

TIME MACHINE

Storylines, Branching Choices & Aftermaths

+ Copy-Paste Google Flow Video Prompts

16:9 · Seamless 360° Equirectangular · 10s · No On-Screen Text

1857 — 1857 — The Revolt (9 scenes)

1941 — 1941 — The World at War (5 scenes)

2250 — 2250 — The Continuum (4 scenes)

3 years, 18 scene videos total. Each year branches once; 1857's two paths stay separate all the way to their own ending, while 1941 and 2250 branch and then reconverge into one shared final scene.

1857 — The Revolt

May 1857. Rumours that new cartridges are greased with cow and pig fat have set the sepoy lines at Meerut alight. You are a young sepoy in the Bengal Native Infantry, and tonight you choose a side.

STORYLINE & BRANCHING CHOICES

MEERUT — THE REFUSAL (s1.mp4)

Evening, the Meerut cantonment. Sepoys of the 3rd Cavalry, just released from jail for refusing the cartridges, are being egged on by a furious crowd. Muskets are being loaded in the open.

Option (Delhi): March to Delhi to join Bahadur Shah II.

Option (Jhansi): March south to join Rani Lakshmibai at Jhansi.

THE MARCH TO DELHI (s2-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path]

Two days later. You are part of the column marching on Delhi to place itself under the banner of the aged Mughal emperor, Bahadur Shah II.

BAHADUR SHAH DECLARES WAR (s3-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path]

At the Red Fort, Bahadur Shah II formally accepts leadership of the uprising and declares open resistance against the East India Company.

THE SIEGE OF DELHI (s4-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path]

Months into the revolt, British forces have encircled Delhi and begun a sustained bombardment of its walls.

DEFEAT AT DELHI (s5-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path — terminal]

The city falls after a brutal siege.

Aftermath: Delhi falls after a brutal siege that summer. Bahadur Shah II is captured and exiled to Rangoon, the last of the Mughal line to sit — however briefly — as a symbol of resistance. The British response is swift and merciless. Yet the sight of princes, sepoys, and commoners fighting under one banner at Delhi becomes the seed of an idea that outlives the defeat: that an ancient, fractured land could still imagine itself as one.*

THE MARCH TO JHANSI (s2-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path]

You march south with a smaller band of sepoys and villagers to join Rani Lakshmibai's resistance.

JHANSI DECLARES RESISTANCE (s3-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path]

Rani Lakshmibai arms her people and formally declares she will not surrender her kingdom.

THE BATTLE OF JHANSI (s4-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path]

British siege guns bombard the fort as its defenders, including many women, hold the walls.

DEFEAT AT JHANSI (s5-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path — terminal]

Weeks after Jhansi falls, Rani Lakshmibai makes her final stand near Gwalior.

Aftermath: Rani Lakshmibai falls in battle at Gwalior weeks after Jhansi itself is stormed, reportedly still on horseback, sword in hand. The British annex her kingdom outright. But her defiance becomes the single most retold story of 1857 — recited in songs and schoolbooks alike — proof that resistance, even in defeat, can outlast the empire that crushed it.

1857 — The Revolt — GOOGLE FLOW PROMPTS

Copy each block below straight into Google Flow. All 9 clips for this year use the same 16:9, seamless 360° equirectangular, 10-second, single-continuous-shot format with no on-screen text.

MEERUT — THE REFUSAL (s1.mp4)

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Meerut cantonment parade ground, dusk, May 1857.

[ACTION] Standing in a dusty, torch-lit parade square ringed by low barrack buildings, you watch a furious crowd of Indian sepoy in East India Company red coats surround a handful of men just freed from a jail cart, its door hanging open. Some sepoys load muskets in the open; others point angrily toward the British officers' quarters at the far end of the square. Dust drifts through low orange torchlight.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

SEPOY (shouting): "They jailed our brothers for refusing poison — tonight, we choose a side!"

OLDER SEPOY (urgent, low): "Delhi or Jhansi — decide now, there is no more time left to us."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE MARCH TO DELHI (s2-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Dirt road toward Delhi, hazy morning.

[ACTION] You march inside a dust-choked column of sepoys and irregular fighters along a rutted road, the immense red sandstone walls and domes of the Red Fort rising out of the morning haze ahead. Banners sway overhead; bullock carts creak past loaded with muskets and grain sacks as the column funnels toward a distant gatehouse.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

COLUMN LEADER (calling back): "The Emperor's gates stand open for us — march faster, before the sun turns against us!"

YOUNG SEPOY (breathless): "Will the old Emperor truly lead us, brother, or only shelter us?"

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

BAHADUR SHAH DECLARES WAR (s3-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Red Fort courtyard, Delhi, midday.

[ACTION] Inside the grand red sandstone courtyard of the Red Fort, an elderly Mughal emperor in white robes and a jeweled turban stands on a raised marble platform, nobles and sepoy officers gathered below, mismatched banners raised together for the first time as a mixed crowd fills the courtyard, cheering.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

BAHADUR SHAH II (solemn, measured): "Let Delhi answer for all of Hindustan today — we take up arms against the Company, together."

CROWD (overlapping cheer): "Long live the Badshah! Long live Hindustan!"

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE SIEGE OF DELHI (s4-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Delhi's battered city wall, night, under bombardment.

[ACTION] You stand atop a scarred sandstone city wall at night, lit in flashes by distant cannon fire beyond the ramparts, smoke drifting across broken battlements. A handful of exhausted defenders reload muskets beside you as fires glow along the horizon.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

DEFENDER (hoarse, reloading): "British guns again on the Kashmiri Gate — they mean to break it before dawn!"

YOU (grim, steady): "Then we hold until dawn proves them wrong."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

DEFEAT AT DELHI (s5-delhi.mp4)

[Delhi path — terminal]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Delhi's inner lanes, smoke-filled, the city falling.

[ACTION] You move through a smoke-choked lane inside the old city as distant gunfire and shouting echo between crumbling buildings, British soldiers advancing at the far end of the frame, refugees and defenders alike scattering past you into doorways and side alleys.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

FLEEING DEFENDER (desperate): "The gates are lost — the Emperor has fled toward Humayun's tomb!"

YOU (quiet, resigned): "Then Delhi's fight ends today. Hindustan's does not."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE MARCH TO JHANSI (s2-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Open road south toward Jhansi, dusty afternoon.

[ACTION] You march with a smaller band of sepoy and villagers along a sun-baked road, fields and scattered trees stretching to the horizon, the distant walls of Jhansi fort just visible as a pale silhouette on a rocky rise ahead.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

FELLOW MARCHER (determined): "They say the Rani herself will arm every man and woman who reaches those walls."

YOU (resolved): "Then let us not be the ones who arrive too late to matter."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

JHANSI DECLARES RESISTANCE (s3-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Courtyard of Jhansi Fort, morning.

[ACTION] Inside a sunlit stone courtyard within Jhansi Fort, Rani Lakshmibai stands in armor beside her generals, addressing a gathered crowd of soldiers and townspeople, swords and muskets raised in response as temple bells ring somewhere beyond the walls.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

RANI LAKSHMIBAI (fierce, commanding): "I shall not surrender my Jhansi — not to any crown across the sea!"

CROWD (roaring response): "Jai Bhavani! For the Rani, for Jhansi!"

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE BATTLE OF JHANSI (s4-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Jhansi Fort ramparts, under artillery bombardment, daylight.

[ACTION] You stand on the fort's stone ramparts as cannon smoke rolls across the battlements, defenders — including several women beside the regular soldiers — loading muskets and hauling ammunition under a barrage from British siege guns positioned on the plain below.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

GUNNER (shouting over the barrage): "Their breach guns are walking closer to the southern wall!"

RANI LAKSHMIBAI (steady, decisive): "Then the southern wall holds, or none of us needed walls at all."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

DEFEAT AT JHANSI (s5-jhansi.mp4)

[Jhansi path — terminal]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Open ground near Gwalior, dusk, final stand.

[ACTION] On a dusty plain near Gwalior at dusk, you watch Rani Lakshmibai, sword drawn, mounted on her horse amid a small band of remaining cavalry, charging into a distant line of advancing British soldiers as smoke and the last orange light of day blur the horizon.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

CAVALRY OFFICER (shouting, desperate): "Rani, fall back — there are too many now!"

RANI LAKSHMIBAI (unwavering, distant): "A soldier's daughter dies facing forward — always forward!"

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

1941 — The World at War

7 December 1941, early morning. You're a young U.S. Navy signalman aboard a ship moored at Pearl Harbor. What starts here ends, four years later, in a single blinding flash of light.

STORYLINE & BRANCHING CHOICES

DAWN AT PEARL HARBOR (s1.mp4)

From the signal deck you spot an unusually large formation of aircraft approaching low over the water — wrong silhouettes for a drill.

THE WORLD AT WAR (s2.mp4)

Years pass. The war has become global. You now stand in on a wartime command room as the Allies weigh where to strike next — and a new, terrible weapon is nearly ready.

Option (Hiroshima): Witness the bombing of Hiroshima.

Option (Nagasaki): Witness the bombing of Nagasaki.

HIROSHIMA — AUGUST 6, 1945 (s3-hiroshima.mp4)

[if Hiroshima]

The first atomic bomb used in war detonates over Hiroshima.

NAGASAKI — AUGUST 9, 1945 (s3-nagasaki.mp4)

[if Nagasaki]

Three days later, a second atomic bomb detonates over Nagasaki.

OUT OF THE ASHES (s4.mp4)

[merged final scene — terminal]

Whichever city you witnessed, the outcome converges here: the war's end, and your return.

Aftermath: Within days of the second bombing, Japan announces its surrender, ending the deadliest war in human history. The atomic age begins in the same instant it ends a war — a genie that no future generation, including the one you just returned to, will ever fully put back in the bottle.

1941 — The World at War — GOOGLE FLOW PROMPTS

Copy each block below straight into Google Flow. All 5 clips for this year use the same 16:9, seamless 360° equirectangular, 10-second, single-continuous-shot format with no on-screen text.

DAWN AT PEARL HARBOR (s1.mp4)

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Signal deck of a moored battleship, Pearl Harbor, 7:50 AM, 7 December 1941.

[ACTION] You stand on an open steel signal deck above a battleship's grey hull, Pearl Harbor's calm blue water and Ford Island's palm trees spread below in soft early light, distant church bells drifting from shore. A dense formation of dark aircraft grows larger against the sky, engine noise swelling from a faint hum to an unmistakable roar.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

YOU (urgent): "Sir — that formation isn't ours, that is not our formation!"

OFFICER OF THE DECK (skeptical): "Confirm it through channels, sailor, before you start a panic."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE WORLD AT WAR (s2.mp4)

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Allied wartime command room, map table lit by hanging lamps, later in the war.

[ACTION] Inside a dim command room, officers lean over a large illuminated map table marked with fronts across Europe, North Africa, and the Pacific, red and blue unit markers being moved by gloved hands as a radio operator in the background relays clipped transmissions.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

SENIOR OFFICER (grim): “Three continents are burning at once now, gentlemen — choose our priority.”

RADIO OPERATOR (urgent, calling out): “New dispatch from the Pacific, sir — it’s urgent.”

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

HIROSHIMA — AUGUST 6, 1945 (s3-hiroshima.mp4)

[if Hiroshima]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Elevated vantage point overlooking Hiroshima, clear morning, 6 August 1945.

[ACTION] You stand at a high vantage point overlooking a quiet city under a clear blue morning sky, rooftops and a winding river stretching below, when a blinding white flash fills the horizon, followed by a churning column of fire and smoke rising and spreading into a towering cloud as a visible shockwave ripples outward across the rooftops.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

DISTANT VOICE (shouting, disbelieving): “What in God’s name was that light—”

YOU (whispering, stunned): “The whole sky just turned to fire.”

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

NAGASAKI — AUGUST 9, 1945 (s3-nagasaki.mp4)

[if Nagasaki]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Hillside overlooking Nagasaki harbor, hazy late morning, 9 August 1945.

[ACTION] You stand on a green hillside above a harbor city wrapped in light haze, ships visible in the bay below, when a sudden blinding flash erupts beyond a ridge of hills, followed seconds later by a rolling shockwave that bends the trees around you and a vast mushroom-shaped cloud climbing into the sky.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

FARMER NEARBY (frightened): “Get down — get down now, whatever that was!”

YOU (breathless): “It’s like the sun fell out of the sky.”

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

OUT OF THE ASHES (s4.mp4)

[merged final scene — terminal]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Blast-lit horizon dissolving into pure light, transitional and surreal.

[ACTION] The scorched horizon and rising cloud fill your view as a wave of blinding white-gold light silently rushes outward and engulfs everything in the frame, the scene dissolving into pure radiant light that swirls and reshapes itself into the humming, glowing interior of the time machine’s cockpit, instruments flickering back to life around you.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

DISTANT VOICE (echoing, fading): “Every war ends somewhere. This one ends here, in light.”

YOU (whispering, as the light overtakes you): “Take me home.”

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

2250 — The Continuum

Year 2250. Earth's climate has stabilized under decades of careful restoration. Aboard an orbital relay station, you're the first to notice something ancient, waking up.

STORYLINE & BRANCHING CHOICES

ORBITAL RELAY, YEAR 2250 (s1.mp4)

An ancient, dormant signal near the edge of the solar system suddenly begins repeating with increasing structure — it's waking up.

Option (Open): Broadcast Earth's full coordinates and history — trust the signal.

Option (Guarded): Respond with a minimal, cautious signal — reveal as little as possible.

THE OPEN SIGNAL (s2-open.mp4)

[if Open]

You choose full transparency and broadcast Earth's location and history outward.

THE GUARDED SIGNAL (s2-guarded.mp4)

[if Guarded]

You choose caution, sending only a minimal, tightly focused signal that withholds Earth's exact position.

FIRST CONTACT (s3.mp4)

[merged final scene — terminal]

Whichever way you answered, the artifact responds — and the truth of what it is becomes clear.

Aftermath: The artifact was never a threat, and never fully a gift either — it was a question, one final test embedded by a species that vanished before their sun burned out. Whether you answered openly or carefully, Earth was the same age it has always been when a doorway opens: not fully ready, but past the point of turning back. The Continuum has been listening for ten thousand years. It just started listening back.

2250 — The Continuum — GOOGLE FLOW PROMPTS

Copy each block below straight into Google Flow. All 4 clips for this year use the same 16:9, seamless 360° equirectangular, 10-second, single-continuous-shot format with no on-screen text.

ORBITAL RELAY, YEAR 2250 (s1.mp4)

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Observation dome of an orbital relay station, Earth visible below, year 2250.

[ACTION] You float inside a curved glass observation dome aboard an orbital relay station, Earth's oceans and restored green continents turning slowly below, when a bank of instruments beside you begins pulsing in unison, a complex layered signal pattern rendering across a holographic display, clearly artificial and growing more intricate by the second.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

AI ASSISTANT (calm, synthetic tone): “The signal is repeating with increasing structure. It appears to be... waking up.”

YOU (quiet, wary): “Then something out there has been waiting a very long time.”

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE OPEN SIGNAL (s2-open.mp4)

[if Open]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Relay station's transmission bay, banks of antennae visible through a viewport.

[ACTION] You stand before a curved console lined with glowing controls as a wide viewport shows the station's antenna array unfolding further outward, indicator lights racing along their length as a full outbound broadcast carrying Earth's coordinates and history streams out into the dark.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

AI ASSISTANT (steady): "Transmission complete. Earth's location and history are now openly shared."

YOU (breath held): "Let's hope we just introduced ourselves, and not something worse."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

THE GUARDED SIGNAL (s2-guarded.mp4)

[if Guarded]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Relay station's transmission bay, dim emergency lighting, cautious mood.

[ACTION] You stand before the same console, now lit only by dim amber emergency lighting, watching a single small probe detach silently from the station and drift outward on a minimal, tightly focused signal, deliberately withholding Earth's exact position as sensors quietly listen for any response.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

AI ASSISTANT (low, careful): "Minimal-disclosure signal sent. Our exact position remains masked, for now."

YOU (tense): "Let's see if 'careful' is even still possible, out here."

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.

FIRST CONTACT (s3.mp4)

[merged final scene — terminal]

[FORMAT] Seamless 360° equirectangular panoramic video, 16:9 aspect ratio, single continuous shot, no cuts, no visible camera rig, no seam or visible stitch line at the horizontal wrap edge, photorealistic cinematic lighting, 10 seconds. Absolutely no on-screen text, captions, subtitles, watermarks, or logos anywhere in the frame.

[LOCATION / TIME] Deep space near an awakening ancient structure, vast and slowly unfolding.

[ACTION] Your viewport fills with the vast, slowly unfolding form of an ancient structure near Europa, geometric plating peeling back layer by layer to reveal a pulsing core of golden light, which suddenly floods outward in a silent wave that overtakes your entire field of view, the light reshaping itself into the familiar glowing interior of the time machine's cockpit around you.

[DIALOGUE — English, spoken naturally by the characters in-scene, no subtitles rendered]

ANCIENT VOICE (echoing, otherworldly, translated warmly): “Another young species, still asking the same first question we once asked.”

YOU (awed, quiet): “And what question is that?”

[AUDIO] Immersive spatial ambience matching the location, dialogue mixed clearly over ambience, subtle cinematic score undertone.

[CAMERA] Fixed 360° capture point at head height, no pans, no zooms — the viewer looks around freely; all motion comes from the scene itself.